Frank T. Averill

The sad intelligence of the death of Frank T. Averill was received here with the greatest regret. His remains were brought here on the evening train, Saturday, from Harrisburg, for burial, his death having occurred that morning. His wife, who resides in this place, on Friday received a telegram that her husband was dying and she and daughter hastened to his bedside.

The deceased had been employed in Chicago as a foreman of linemen and two years ago was seized with paralysis, since which time his decline had been rapid. He came east with his family. Last February, on account of violence at times, by the advice of physicians he was taken to the Asylum at Harrisburg. His decline was rapid until death claimed him.

Mr. Averill was a son of the late John Averill, a school teacher and a former resident of Sandy Hill, but of late years a resident of Schellsburg, Bedford county, who died last February. His mother's maiden name was Sarah Moorehead, who had been with her son three weeks prior to his death. With the widow and daughter she accompanied the remains to this place.

December 26, 1901, Mr. Averill was united in wedlock by Rev. J. T. Bell, with Harriet O., daughter of John A. Kistler and wife, of this place, who survives with one daughter.

The deceased was a member of a Chicago Masonic lodge. He was of a kind disposition and made friends wherever he went. The following brothers and sisters survive: George of Pittsburg, William of Lewistown, Mich., Mrs. Jennie McIninch of Pittsburg and Margaret—Mrs. Thomas Clawson of Cumberland, Md.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the residence of Mrs. Averill's parents, Rev. W. S. Rose of the M. E. church officiating; interment in the M. E. cemetery. Beautiful floral tributes were presented. Deceased was aged 34 years, nine months and 29 days.—Blain Correspondent in Advocate and Press. [The associates of Frank T. THANKSGIVING

By JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

Let us be thankful—not only because
Since last our universal thanks were told
We have grown greater in the world's applause,
And Fortune's newer smiles surpass the old—

But thankful for all things that come as alms
From out the open hand of Providence;
The winter clouds and storms—the summer calms—
The sleepless dread—the drowse of indolence.

Let us be thankful—thankful for the prayers
Whose gracious answers were long, long delayed.
That they might fall upon us unawares,
And bless us, as in greater need, we prayed.

Let us be thankful for the loyal hand
That love held out in welcome to our own,
When love and only love could understand
The need of touches we had never known.

Let us be thankful for the longing eyes
That gave their secret to us as they wept,
Yet in return found, with a sweet surprise,
Love's touch upon their lids, and, smiling, slept.

And let us, too, be thankful that the tears
Of sorrow have not all been drained away,
That through them still, for all the coming years,
We may look on the dead face of To-day.

The fourth annual convention of the school directors of Bedford county will be held at Bedford on Friday and Saturday, December 14 and 15, 1906. Under the law, the convention dare not be held at the same time as the County Institute, but coming, as it does this year, on the Friday immediately preceding Institute week it is hoped that many of the teachers of the county will avail themselves of the opportunity to be present at one or more sessions. We are gratified to be able to announce that Supt. O. J. Kern, the famous superintendent of schools for Winnebago county, Illinois, has been engaged to deliver his lecture on "Rural School Problems" on the evening of December 14. The lecture will be profusely illustrated with stereoscopic pictures and will be free not only to directors but to the public as well. It has been said that Supt. Kern has done more for the rural school problem than any other educator in America. It has required considerable effort to procure him and it is hoped that directors, teachers, and citizens will make a special effort to hear him.

The convention will open with an address by the president of the organization, M. H. Kramer, Esq., of Hyndman. Prof. J. A. Myers of Juniata College will take part in the program. "SAVED MY LIFE"

—That's what a prominent druggist said of Scott's Emulsion a short time ago. As a rule we don't use or refer to testimonials in addressing the public, but the above remark and similar expressions are made so often in connection with Scott's Emulsion that they are worthy of occasional note. From infancy to old age Scott's Emulsion offers a reliable means of remedying improper and weak development, restoring lost flesh and vitality, and repairing waste. The action of Scott's Emulsion is no more of a secret than the composition of the Emulsion itself. What it does it does through nourishment—the kind of nourishment that cannot be obtained in ordinary food. No system is too weak or delicate to retain Scott's Emulsion and gather good from it.

We will send you a sample free. Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

CHAPTER XVIII.

FOR three weeks the wind kept at east or northeast, always at a brisk breeze and freshening sometimes into half a gale. The Golden Rod sped merrily upon her way, with every sail drawing a low and aloft, so that by the end of the third week Amos and Ephraim Savage were reckoning out the hours before they would look upon their native land once more.

"Tomorrow we should make land by my reckoning," said Captain Savage.

"Ah, tomorrow! And what will it be—Mount Desert, Cape Cod, Long Island?"

"Nay, lad; we are in the latitude of the St. Lawrence and are more likely to see the Acadia coast. Then, with this wind, a day should carry us south, or two at the most. A few more such voyages, and I shall buy myself a fair brick house in Green lane of north Boston, where I can look down on the bay or on the Charles or the Mystic and see the ships comin' and goin'. So I would end my life in peace and quiet."

The mate's watch that night was from 12 to 4, and the moon was shining brightly for the first hour of it. In the early morning, however, it clouded over, and the Golden Rod plunged into one of those dim, clammy mists which lie on all that tract of ocean. So thick was it that from the poop one could just make out the loom of the foresail, but could see nothing of the foretopmast staysail or the jib. The wind was northeast, with a very keen edge to it, and the dainty brigantine lay over, scudding along with her lee rails within hand's touch of the water. It had suddenly turned very cold—so cold that the mate stamped up and down the poop, and his four seamen shivered together under the shelter of the bulwarks. And then in a moment one of them was up, thrusting his forefinger into the air and screaming, while a huge white wall sprang out of the darkness at the very end of the bowsprit, and the ship struck with a force which snapped her two masts like dried reeds in a wind and changed her in an instant to a crushed and shapeless heap of spars and wreckage.

The mate had shot the length of the poop at the shock and had narrowly escaped from the falling mast, while of his four men two had been hurled through the huge gap which yawned in the bows, while a third had dashed his head to pieces against the stock of the anchor. Tomlinson staggered forward to find the whole front part of the vessel driven inward and a single seaman sitting dazed amid splintered spars, flapping sails and writhing, lashing cordage. It was still as dark as pitch, and, save the white crest of a leaping wave, nothing was to be seen beyond the side of the vessel. The mate was peering round him in despair at the ruin which had come so suddenly upon them, when he found Captain Ephraim at his elbow, half clad, but as wooden and serene as ever.

"An iceberg," said he, sniffling at the chill air. "Did you not smell it, friend Tomlinson?"

"Truly I found it cold, Captain Savage, but I set it down to the mist."

"There is a mist ever set around them, though the Lord in his wisdom knows best why, for it is a sore trial to poor sailor men. It makes water fast, Mr. Tomlinson."

The other watch had swarmed upon deck, and one of them was measuring the well. "There is three feet of water," he cried, "and the pumps sucked dry yesterday."

"Hiram Jefferson and John Moreton, to the pumps!" cried the captain. "Mr. Tomlinson, clear away the longboat and let us see if we may set her right!"

"The longboat has stove two planks!" cried a seaman.

"The jolly boat, then!"

"She is in three pieces."

"Where is Amos Green?"

"Here, Captain Ephraim. What can I do?"

"And I?" asked De Catnat eagerly. Adele and her father had been wrapped in mantles and placed for shelter in the lee of the roundhouse.

"Tell him that he can take his spell at the pumps," said the captain to Amos. "And you, Amos, you are a handy man with a tool. Get into yonder longboat with a lantern."

For half an hour Amos Green hammered and trimmed and calked.

"You've not much time, Amos lad," said the captain quietly.

"She'll float now, though she's not quite water tight."

"Very good. Lower away. Keep up the pumping there. Mr. Tomlinson, see that provisions and water are ready, as much as she will hold. Come with me, Hiram Jefferson."

The seaman and the captain swung themselves down into the tossing boat, the latter with a lantern strapped to his waist. Together they made their way until they were under her mangled bows. The captain shook his head when he saw the extent of the damage. "Cut away the foresail and pass it over," said he.

Tomlinson and Amos Green cut away the lashings with their knives and lowered the corner of the sail. Captain Ephraim and the seaman seized it and dragged it across the mouth of the huge gaping leak. "How much in the well?" he asked.

"Five and a half feet."

"Then the ship is lost. I could put my finger between her planks as far as I can see back. Keep the pumps going there! Have you the food and water, Mr. Tomlinson?"

"Here, sir."

"Lower them over the bows. This boat cannot live more than an hour or two. Can you see anything of the berg?"

The mist had thinned away suddenly, and the moon glimmered through once more upon the great lonely sea and the stricken ship. There, like a huge sail, was the monster piece of ice upon which they had shattered themselves.

"You must make for her," said Captain Ephraim. "There is no other chance. Lower the gal over the bows. Well, then, her father first, if she likes it better. Tell them to sit still, Amos, and that the Lord will bear us up if we keep clear of foolishness. So! You're a brave lass for all your niminy pininy lingo. Now the keg and the barrel and all the wraps and cloaks you can find; now the other man, the Frenchman. Aye, aye, passengers first, and you have got to come! Now Amos, now the seamen, and you last, friend Tomlinson."

It was well that they had not very far to go, for the boat was weighted down almost to the edge, and it took the bailing of two men to keep in check the water which leaked in between the shattered planks. When all were safely in their places Captain Ephraim Savage swung himself aboard again, which was but too easy now that every minute brought the bows nearer to the water. He came back with a bundle of clothing, which he threw into the boat. "Push off!" he cried.

"Jump in, then."

"Ephraim Savage goes down with his ship," said he quietly. "Friend Tomlinson, it is not my way to give my orders more than once. Push off, I say!"

The mate thrust her out with a boat hook. Amos Green and De Catnat gave a cry of dismay, but the stolid New Englanders settled down to their oars and pulled off.

"The boat leaks like a sieve," said the mate. "I will take her to the berg, leave you all there if we can find footing and go back for the captain."

But they had not taken fifty strokes before Adele gave a sudden scream. "My God!" she cried. "The ship is going down!"

She had settled lower and lower in the water, and suddenly, with a sound of rending planks, she thrust down her bows like a diving waterfowl, her stern flew up into the air, and with a long sucking noise she shot down swifter and swifter, until the leaping waves closed over her high poop lantern. With one impulse the boat swept round again and made backward as fast as willing arms could pull it. But all was quiet at the scene of the disaster. Not even a fragment of wreckage was left upon the surface to show where the Golden Rod had found her last harbor. For a long quarter of an hour they pulled round and round in the moonlight, but no glimpse could they see of the Puritan seaman, and at last, when in spite of the ballers the water was washing round their ankles, they put her head about once more and made their way in silence and with heavy hearts to their dreary island of refuge.

Desolate as it was, it was their only hope now, for the lead was increasing, and it was evident that the boat could not be kept afloat long.

The cliff which faced them was precipitous, and it glimmered and sparkled all over where the silver light fell upon the thousand facets of ice. Right in the center, however, on a level with the water's edge, there was what appeared to be a huge hollowed out cave, which marked the spot where the Golden Rod had, in shattering herself, dislodged a huge bowlder, and so, amid her own ruin, prepared a refuge for those who had trusted themselves to her. This cavern was of the richest emerald green, light and clear at the edges, but toning away into the deepest purples and blues at the back. But it was not the beauty of this grotto, nor was it the assurance of rescue, which brought a cry of joy and of wonder from every lip, but it was that, seated upon an ice bowlder and placidly smoking a long cornucob pipe, there was perched in front of them no less a person than Captain Ephraim Savage of Boston.

"Friend Tomlinson," said he, "when I tell you to row for an iceberg I mean you to row right away there, d'ye see, and not to go phillandering about over the ocean. It's not your fault that I'm not froze, and so I would have been if I hadn't some dry tobacco and my tinder box to keep myself warm."

Without stopping to answer his commander's reproaches the mate headed for the ledge, which had been cut into a slope by the bow of the brigantine, so that the boat was run up easily on to the ice. Captain Ephraim seized his dry clothes and vanished into the back of the cave, to return presently warmer in body and more contented in mind. The longboat had been turned upside down for a seat, the gratings and thwart taken out and covered with wraps to make a couch for the lady, and the head knocked out of the keg of biscuits.

"We were much frightened for you, Ephraim," said Amos Green. "I had a heavy heart this night when I thought that I should never see you more."

"Tut, Amos; you should have known me better."

"But how came you here, captain?" asked Tomlinson. "I thought that maybe you had been taken down by the suck of the ship."

"And so I was. It is the third ship in which I have gone down, but they have never kept me down yet. I went deeper tonight than when the Speedwell sank, but not so deep as in the Governor Winthrop. When I came up I swam to the berg, found this nook and crawled in. Glad I was to see you, for I feared that you had foundered."

"We put back to pick you up, and we passed you in the darkness. And what should we do now?"

"Rig up that boat sail and make quarters for the gal, then get our supper and such rest as we can, for there is nothing to be done tonight."

In the morning Amos Green was aroused by a hand upon his shoulder and, springing to his feet, found De Catnat standing beside him. The latter's face was grave, and his friend read danger in his eyes.

"What is it, then?"

"The berg. It is coming to pieces. I have been watching it. You see that crack which extends backward from the end of our grotto? Two hours ago I could scarce put my hand into it. Now I can slip through it with ease."

Amos Green walked to the end of the funnel shaped recess and found, as his friend had said, that a green sinuous crack extended away backward into the iceberg, caused either by the tossing of the waves or by the terrific impact of their vessel. He roused Captain Ephraim and pointed out the danger to him.

"Well, if she springs a leak we are gone," said he. "She's been thawing pretty fast as it is."

They could see now that the whole huge mass was brittle and honey-combed and rotten.

"Hello!" cried Amos Green. "What's that? I could have sworn that I heard a voice."

"Impossible. We are all here."

"It must have been my fancy, then."

Captain Ephraim walked to the seaward face of the cave and swept the ocean with his eyes. "We should lie in the track of some ships," said he. "There's the codders and the herring busses. We're overfar south for them, I reckon. But we can't be more'n 200 miles from Port Royal, in Acadia, and we're in the line of the St. Lawrence trade. What is it, Amos?"

The young hunter was standing with his ear slanting, his head bent forward, and his eyes glancing sidewise, like a man who listens intently. He was about to answer when De Catnat gave a cry and pointed to the back of the cave.

"Look at the crack now!"

It had widened by a foot since they had noticed it last until it was now no longer a crack. It was a pass. "Let us go through," said the captain. He led the way, and the other two

SPRAYING DEMONSTRATIONS

From reports that come to us of the spraying demonstrations that are now being conducted in the county by Ross F. Lee we conclude that our farmers and fruit-growers are not attaching sufficient importance to the matter.

The San Jose scale exists in many parts of the county and where allowed to go on increasing it destroys the trees; this knowledge should be sufficient to spur those interested in fruit growing to action. The state has taken the matter up and has done considerable experimenting with fungicides and insecticides and has arrived at the conclusion that the lime-sulphur-salt solution is the only practical and effectual destroyer of the San Jose scale.

Mr. Lee, who is and has been giving the demonstrations, has taken a course at State College and is now paid a salary by the state to do the work in which he is engaged for the general good of those interested in raising fruit. The state has done and is doing its part and it is now the duty of the farmers and fruit growers to take advantage of the opportunities that are being given. Wake up!

In addition to being permitted to see the spraying done those who attend at the times and places designated by Mr. Lee have an opportunity to see the solution made, to learn the proportions of the ingredients and to ask questions pertaining to the insect and to the modes of treatment for its banishment. Save your trees!

TARDY REMOVAL

The bringing to Philadelphia this week of the remains of James Wilson, signer of the Declaration of Independence and eminent jurist, is indeed tardy.

Following services at Edenton, N. C., the casket was taken to Norfolk and placed on the U. S. gunboat Duquesne by which they were brought to Philadelphia for re-interment. Having been placed for a time in Independence Hall they were then taken to Christ's church and interred, the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court acting as honorary pallbearers.

Tributes were rendered by the Governor of the state and other prominent citizens.

Among the men who figured prominently in the affairs of the infant nation James Wilson is too frequently overlooked. His name deserves a place with those of Jefferson, Madison, Marshall and Hamilton.

Lucian Hugh Alexander, in a contribution to the North American Review says of Wilson:

In judicial learning, in national patriotism, in the power to make things happen, in dynamic intellectual power, no man of the great constructive days of the American Republic excelled James Wilson. He was a member of the Continental Congress, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, great leader in the United States Constitutional Convention and a Justice of the Supreme Court by appointment of Washington on the establishment of that court.

More than any one man he made the Declaration possible and practically effective. His vote made it possible; for, without the prestige of Pennsylvania's vote, it would probably have failed of affirmative action, and certainly would have proved abortive. Two of the Pennsylvania delegates, John Dickinson and Robert Morris, were unwilling to support action so radical, and declined to vote. Exclusive of Wilson, the four remaining Pennsylvania delegates were evenly divided, and Wilson, untrammelled by the influence of the learned Dickinson, his preceptor in the law, and holding the balance of power, wielded it for the cause of liberty and independence.

James Wilson organized a regiment at the outbreak of the Revolution and became Director General of the Pennsylvania militia. In the intense fight in Pennsylvania for the ratification of the U. S. Constitution Wilson's Herculean labors for its adoption—his oratory, his power and the logic of his argument—did more than the efforts of any other individual. Far in advance of his times he advocated the election of Senators by popular vote, and it was due to his efforts that the Constitution was made to cover all ground too wide for the individual states.

Pennsylvania has indeed been tardy in bringing within her confines the remains of a distinguished, though almost forgotten son, whose best efforts were put forth in that formative period of our government for his country and his state, and whose remains have lain too long in the sunny south.

THANKSGIVING DAY

It is essential that the people of the American nation take time to stop and think and to be grateful and to express that gratitude, for many are the blessings enjoyed.

Never in the history of the world has the nation existed that owed a deeper debt of gratitude for the abundant natural resources that have made possible the wonderful development and the growth of the American nation. In a comparatively short time we have grown from a few settlements along the Atlantic coast to a nation of vast possessions and from struggling colonies, often hostile to each other, to a mighty nation, united and powerful to the point where the respect of the world may be commanded.

But not only for national achievements should we give thanks to the God of nations, for the same Power that presides over the destinies of nations takes account of the affairs of individuals, and the individual who is too much imbued with the all-pervading commercialistic spirit of the time to devote a part of one day in 365 to thanksgiving is hardly worthy the powers, mental and physical, with which Providence has endowed him. The proclamation is national and the duty and responsibility rests not alone upon church members but upon all who enjoy the blessings of life and liberty.

HOME FOR POOR CHILDREN

The special effort being made by Prof. D. Emmert of Juniata College, Huntingdon, to secure sufficient endowment to place on a firm financial foundation the home for poor children, in Huntingdon, is worthy and should be responded to by liberal contributions.

Prof. Emmert has done and is doing a noble work. He has literally redeemed many poor children from surrounding conditions leading to degradation and has placed them in homes where they have grown to manhood and womanhood, and their lives have reflected credit upon the Huntingdon home and have spoken volumes for the good work of which Prof. Emmert has been at the head for a number of years.

The cause is worthy and merits support and the self-sacrificing devotion of Prof. Emmert to the noble work should call forth liberal support from this county which has derived benefits from the institution.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Interest Firmly Fixed Upon Prosecution of

STANDARD OIL COMPANY

Attorney General Confident of Winning—Criminal Prosecution May Follow Civil Suit.

Washington, D. C., November 20.—While the prosecution of the Standard Oil Company will center in St. Louis, the interest of Washington is very firmly fixed upon it because the prosecution is engineered by the Department of Justice here and Attorney General Moody has announced that he is confident of winning the suit.

There is little doubt in the minds of people who have followed the investigations made by the government, that there is ample ground for convicting the combine and dissolving it under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. The report of the Bureau of Corporations on the subject last summer showed conclusively that the Standard had been guilty of offenses that warranted a civil prosecution and probably criminal indictment as well. The statement of Attorney General Moody this week, when the suit was first brought, gave a full, although well condensed, account of the rise of the Trust and showed that it was civilly, if not criminally, responsible on several different accounts. The history of the organization dates back to 1870 when, as the Attorney General says, it was a simple conspiracy within the meaning of the law. After it had been prosecuted on this account it originated the idea of the Trust and when it was ousted from this position, it formed the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, which, as a holding company, controlled seventy subsidiary corporations. It was the parent of all Trusts in this country and from a capital of ten million was enabled to increase its stock to $110,000,000 and in the past eight years has paid dividends of over $500,000,000; its disbursements on the average being greater than that of the United States government itself.

The prosecution instituted by the government has already had a very great effect on the price of the stock, which has gone down from $340 to $570 a share, at which figure considerable blocks have changed hands, although the stock is not one in which trading is usually carried on. It is said that in the fall of the last few weeks the paper value of Rockefeller's fortune, has shrunk $17,000,000, but it is to be very seriously doubted whether any of the Standard Oil stock, which had been sold at the lower figure, has gone outside the strong boxes of the charter members of the combine.

It is generally believed that John D. Rockefeller, William Rockefeller, H. H. Rodgers, John D. Archibald, and a number of the other leading lights of the combine have merely taken advantage of the opportunity to pocket a few hundred more shares of the stock at what are probably bargain counter figures.

The question remains, and it has not yet been answered by the government, what the effect will be if the United States wins the suit. It will be remembered that when the original Trust was dissolved, the so-called liquidators took ten years to wind up the affairs of the company, conducting business meanwhile on exactly the same principle as they did before. If an injunction is secured, which forces the winding up of the present company, it is difficult to see how the public will be materially benefited. The control of the companies will, of necessity, remain in the hands of the men who are now directing it and while the methods of the company may be changed it is not likely that the results will be. There is the chance, however, and Attorney General Moody's statement contains the threat, that criminal prosecution may follow the civil suit. It seems almost impossible to imagine Mr. Rockefeller or John D. Archibald undergoing a jail sentence, but if the threat of such sentence were made, the defendants, knowing very well that they deserved the penalty, it might have some effect in reducing the exactions of the corporations from which the country has all along suffered.

TROLLEY LINE TO BEDFORD

Poles are Being Erected and Road to be Open to Newry July 4, 1907.

President F. G. Patterson, of the Altoona, Hollidaysburg and Bedford Springs Electric Railway Company, was in the city yesterday and was in a happy mood when the matter of the proposed road was broached to him. He was as emphatic in saying "Yes" when asked if the road was going to be constructed, as he was some years ago when his energy carried the Wopsey railroad through and got it to the top of the Alleghenies.

Speaking of the trolley line, Mr. Patterson said the contract for furnishing the poles had been awarded to Norman Wilt of Pleasantville, Bedford county, while the contract for setting them went to John Davis of this city. Poles are now being delivered and set between the towns of Duncansville and Newry, and he said cars would be running into Newry by the fourth of July.

The work of construction will be pushed as rapidly as possible and this is particularly true as to the conditions when spring opens up. There is no doubt but that the road will be a great boon to the section of country through which it will pass. Especially will this be so should the incoming Legislature grant trolley companies the right to carry freight.

The road would bring sections of country in touch with the markets in Altoona, and the result would likely be a reduction in the cost of living. —Altoona Tribune, November 21.

Point.
November 19.—Mr. and Mrs. Norman Waite and daughter, of Altoona, were welcome guests of the family of Samuel McIlwaine for several days last week.

NEW YORK LETTER

Number One Thousand Five Hundred Thirty-Nine

COUNT BONI A BEGGAR

Attempt to Graft Royal Stock on a Liberty Tree Has Utterly Failed.

New York, November 21.—"The mills of the Gods grind slowly, but they grind exceeding fine."

When the telegraph flashed over the wire that Count Boni had been knocked out of court, I was sitting by my window looking out on the street and wondering if any rich uncle in India or Australia had suddenly pegged out and left me a million of dollars. All of a sudden the people began to dance and shake hands and slap each other on the back, and then strike off in double shuffle as if they were crazy; I called the servant and told him to find out what the people were dancing for as I did not hear any music; he returned in a few minutes and said that Paris was having a jubilee because Count Boni had been knocked out in the first round of his divorce suit; his guilt was so apparent it was not necessary to call the companions of his infamy into court, so the judges granted a decree of absolute divorce with the right to cast in the mire the hateful name of de Castellane and to resume her maiden name of Gould; it also gave her the guardianship of her children, and worse than all, they cut off his monthly supply of eight thousand dollars, and denied his application for fifty thousand more and literally kicked him out of court, a beggar without a franc in his pocket, and he will have to travel home on his uppers; no more ten thousand dollar dinners for Count Boni and his lady friends; now it's deviled bones with a quart bottle of sour wine thrown in. It was not the loss of money that drove Anna Gould to seek divorce, but when the cowardly brute struck her with his clenched fist, that closed her contract with Count Boni; it was a crime that could never be condoned nor forgiven; her free American blood revolted at the thought that she had ever felt the weight of a man's hand in anger; the sting of that blow she could not forget; it haunted her night and day and her nearest approach to forgetfulness was that she would never set eyes on him again till the judgment day, when the trumpet of the dread Archangel shall summon the quick and the dead. The attempt to graft Royal stock on a Liberty tree has not been an unqualified success; we blame our American heiressees for desiring a title; the love of having a handle to our names is not exclusively confined to our women; when I was a boy there was hardly a man in New England who was not a Captain, Major, Colonel or General; there were no recognized titles below Captain and it was frequently hard to tell whether a man had been a Captain of Artillery, Infantry or a Canal Boat.

I confess I was sorry to see that Mr. Hearst's election expenses amounted to a quarter of a million of dollars. The bitterest political antagonism now exists inside the lines of the Democratic party, and by far the ablest review and sound statement document that has appeared for a generation by either of the greater parties is contributed by Richard Croker, ostensibly an answer to the attacks on himself by Mr. Hearst. One clause in his communication is worthy of the most respectful attention of Democrats and Republicans alike, and also of those who pretend to believe that nothing good can come out of Nazareth.

Here it is: "In conclusion, let me give this advice to the party to refrain from personal vilification in future campaigns; if you cannot win by fair means, don't win by foul ones; do not despair at defeat, if you still retain your manhood; that has been the lesson of my political career." If there is anything in political ethics better or sounder than this, I have never heard of it or read of it. One thing is definitely settled, Mr. Croker will not visit New York; the pure air of Dublin assures him good health so we are compelled to say "Good bye, sweetheart, Good bye."

To the men who believe in the future of our Republic, there could be no greater calamity than the destruction of either of the great political parties which have existed in this land since the adoption of the Federal Constitution in 1787, until the reincarnation of the Perfect Creation is realized; man as he is today, and as he always has existed since creation's dawn will continue to do evil as easily as the sparks fly upward; no system of philosophy has yet been able to divine the reason why men differ on matters of business, religion or politics, but they do and the Mohammedan, the Buddhist, the Catholic or Protestant will die at the stake rather than renounce their opinions; but while the destruction of either of the two great parties that now exist would be a threat to civil and religious disaster the change of opinions through the conservative element in both parties is the surest guarantee of the safety of a government of the people, for the people.

Signor Enrico Caruso, the great tenor of the Italian Grand Opera who receives a thousand dollars a night for his singing was arrested in the monkey house at Central Park for trying to be a masher; he was accused of following a young woman and pinching her arm; she screamed for a policeman and had him arrested; Caruso denies his guilt but the policeman who arrested him saw the assault and recognized him as a man who was guilty of the same offense a year ago. The case made the great tenor sick, and he is now confined to his bed.

Pure gold is of one unvarying and unchanging color, but few people ever see such gold. The kind used as money or for jewelry has alloy in it after it is manufactured into the desired article. In medicine, however, there is one remedy that can always be relied on for its purity and that is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. In its composition is used only the very best and purest ingredients, and its increasing popularity is proof that the public appreciates this one pure remedy. Therefore we urge you to insist on having Hostetter's with our Private Stamp over the neck of the bottle. FORTY-SIX STARS

"Old Glory" to Have Another for Oklahoma.

Flag of the Forty-six stars! There is something inspiring about the mere name. Some one should get busy writing a song with this title, for the forty-sixth star may now be added to the national emblem. The War Department has selected the spot for the new star, and flag-makers are hard at work making new banners, with an additional constellation in the lower right-hand of Old Glory's blue corner piece. All the army and navy flags will be called in and a new star added. Every household and patriot who flies a flag will have to add a new star to be up-to-date. It is not necessary to buy a new flag, but it is essential to add a new star to the lower right-hand corner of the blue field.

The place provided on the flag belongs to the thriving new state, Oklahoma. When Congress reconvenes in December five new members of the House will appear from this new state and the Legislature at its meeting in January will choose two United States Senators, who will probably be in their seats by the first of February.

Strictly speaking it is not necessary to fly the new flag until next year, but the American people like to be up-to-date and already new flags have appeared. Not knowing exactly the official design some have excised their ingenuity and placed the star in the wrong position. Now that it is definitely settled that the star shall go in the lower right-hand corner of the flag it is easy to be correct as well as up-to-date.—Philadelphia Record.

Spraying Demonstrations

I hope the farmers and fruit growers will come out and see these demonstrations. They are only given once in a long while and you miss an opportunity of finding out all about how these insects are found and destroyed. It matters not whether you have scale or not, if you have not, see that you keep your trees clean and if you have you will know how to destroy them. If a demonstration is held in a community it is your duty to be there; because thereafter you cannot be excused on the ground of ignorance. Come and see the demonstration planned for your benefit, bring twigs for examination if your orchard has not been examined yet.

The demonstrations will begin promptly at 1 p. m. and the preparation of the wash is half the battle in fighting the San Jose scale. Come in time, the days are short and there are many things to see and hear.

Monday, November 26, at Jesse Growden's place, about five miles below Centerville.

Tuesday, November 27, at John Gephart's place in Centerville.

Wednesday, November 28, at C. R. Drenning's place on the Tea Berry road, about eight miles below Bedford.

Hoping there will be a good turn out of fruit growers, who will not be frightened by a few San Jose scale, I remain

Yours fraternally,
R. F. Lee,
Inspector and Demonstrator.

OREGON'S POSSIBILITIES.

The Influence of the Promoter—The Value of Irrigation and the Spirit of Thrift.

The American pioneer struck Oregon just when the English fur company failed in the line of settlements and civilization. One carried in the trapper and trader; the other the home maker and his wife; one his traps and rifle; the other his seed wheat and plow. One shot an Indian for killing a beaver out of season, and the other paid bounty on the wolf and bear; one hunted and traded for what he could carry out of the country; the other planted and built for what he could leave in it for his children. One counted his muskrat nests, and the other his bills of corn; one his bales of furs; the other his bushels of grain. In short, the English trader paddled his boat on every stream, and drove his dog team over every trail in Oregon, to bring out furs and peltries; while the American hauled in with his rude wagon the nineteenth century progress. Morning in Oregon dated from that time.

The one was a close corporation, strong in the bands of a feudal monopoly; the other was one of those tidal waves of population that from time to time in the ages have swept into a new country and made a nation.

It has always been the happy fortune of the United States to have a border population that was constantly uneasy to reach a farther front, wilder land and a freer life. Civilization crossed the continent at a rapid pace, and Oregon was conquered in about forty years. In all the vast campaign from east to west, here is the most signal victory, the swiftest, the most complete, the most brilliant achievement. The saving of Oregon to the United States is an exceedingly painful record in human annals. Among the chapters of human tragedies, this is one of the most tragic. For the United States and Great Britain to write and sign the article that gave us Oregon, required fifty-four years, two months and six days. No two policies could come more in contradiction, one fostering all the tastes and habits of the natives, and the other demanding a total change in the modes and grades of life. One policy was to propagate wilderness and beaver, and Indians and half-breeds to catch them; the other, civilization in its highest type and thrift. On the one hand, it was beaver and Indians and wilderness for a huge corporation, and so many pounds sterling dividends; on the other it was settlement, domestic animals, civilization and national wealth.

The English had their own way from 1670, when the fur company was chartered, till 1834, when they met our missionaries in the valley of the Columbia. This region, the original Oregon of the treaty of 1846, is larger than three New England states, and in most respects for human homes and national wealth, it is naturally superior to New England. There is scarcely a grain of fruit, vegetable, grass, tree, plant or flower that grows in the United States or Europe, but some portion of the soil of Oregon will raise to perfection with fair cultivation.

At Portland, one in the Chinese-Australian and general Pacific trade is 10,000 miles nearer to the Asiatic markets than he would be at New York. The great lines of railroads are fast recreating Oregon, as earlier creative processes once came in upon the unfinished state awkwardly waiting to be finished. Oregon, once so far off, has now become our next door neighbor, and as near to New York as Monday is to Friday.

The rivers are thickly laid, and the mountains among which they flow must give them a head and fall for an indefinite amount of power for human use. The falls of the Willamette River at Oregon City, are only one of many which can be put to practical use. These falls supply the power for two paper mills, a woolen and flour mill, also water works and lighting power of Oregon City, and the lighting of Portland and street railway power.

The real Oregonian is first, last and all the time, a promoter. Popular prejudice formerly branded the promoter as a pirate. But what would the west be without him. Let history call him what it may, in truth we know him as a promoter. Wherever progress has been, there also has been risk, speculation, promotion. The west has been developed by greed of gain. It is the hope of reward that incited progress. The promoter is the pioneer and, like the mouse in the milk, he hustles till he floats on a cake of butter of his own making. Study the progress of Oregon and learn a proper respect for the promoter, the pioneer, the explorer, and the exploiter, the man who promotes, organizes and develops. The man who seeks and sees, and seizes opportunity.

An irrigation ditch is promoted and 20,000 acres of dead desert blossom and bloom into fertility. It was worth nothing and increased to $100 an acre. You can figure the percentage yourself. The promoter has added millions to Oregon where he has been paid in thousands. Let us remember that Oregon is a country of opportunities and promotion and that it is yet young. Its undeveloped resources are greater than those developed. So there must be more and greater promotions to come.

In the early days the settler in the west encouraged and hailed the emigrant because of the fact that he made one more consumer for the products of the soil, for which there was but a very limited local market. In contrast with that condition of affairs, we find Oregon today hailing and encouraging immigration upon very different grounds. More laborers are required that the soil may yield its full harvest and that the demands of far away markets may be supplied. It has been brought about by the transportation facilities which have entirely removed the necessity of depending upon local markets, by making accessible to the farmers of Oregon, the markets of every country on the globe. The first settlers here were of necessity, hunters. The present home seeker is a hunter of a bigger game than elk or bear; he is for the deep breaths of the air that makes a man stand up straight and shake off his littleness. For the view far over canyon, forest and crag, for a sight of a little of this earth, before the smut of this world reaches it, for memories to make a man breathe deeper and lift up his heart in coming days for new vigor, new gratitude, new hope, these are today the big game of Oregon.

SURE TO CURE INDIGESTION

Unless Pepsikola Cures Your Dyspepsia Ed. D. Heckerman Will Pay Back the Money.

It is not often that Mr. Heckerman backs up a new remedy with his own personal guarantee but he knows that Pepsikola is sure to help all who have chronic dyspepsia and indigestion the very first day they begin to take it.

Moreover, Mr. Heckerman is too busy and his reputation is worth too much to take chances in recommending a new remedy to his customers that will not do just as represented. Pepsikola is a remarkable preparation and has performed some cures in Bedford that border upon the miraculous. It is also a grand nerve tonic. It improves the appetite, gives new strength and new energy, tones up the stomach and digestive organs, and makes you feel better right off. When you buy a package of Pepsikola you are protected in every way. If it cures you the cost is 25 cents. If it does not, Mr. Heckerman will pay back your money without the least argument.

Cured of Bright's Disease

Mr. Robert O. Burke, Elmhurst, N. Y., writes: "Before I started to use Foley's Kidney Cure I had to get up from twelve to twenty times a night, and I was all bloated up with dropsy and my eyesight was so impaired I could scarcely see one of my family across the room. I had given up hope of living, when a friend recommended Foley's Kidney Cure. One 50 cent bottle worked wonders and before I had taken the third bottle the dropsy had gone, as well as all other symptoms of Bright's disease." Ed. D. Heckerman.

Household Notes

Mix ginger cookies with cold coffee instead of water, as it improves them. Do not thrust the fork again and again into meat that is roasting, or the juices of the meat will run out too much and the flavor be spoiled.

Thin places and breaks in linen should be run with flax or embroidery silk, and towels may be treated in the same manner.

Cranberries can be made very palatable with much less sugar by mixing them with about half their bulk of apples. Rub both cranberries and apples through a colander.

A round piece of tin about three inches in diameter, half of it turned upright, makes a good scraper.

For economy's sake it is better to wear alternate two pairs of shoes, rather than to wear one pair steadily.

A little borax added to the water in which handkerchiefs are rinsed will give them a slight stiffness without making them uncomfortable to the nostrils, an effect which starch is apt to give.

When patent leather shoes show signs of cracking the shoes should be taken at once to a reliable shoe dealer, and be well oiled.

A banana should be quite ripe when eaten. Preferably it should be overripe and beginning to show a little black on the skin.

Coffee beans, sugar, or parsley moistened with sugar, eaten after onions will prevent the latter from being noticeable on the breath. Whenever being used soap should be kept for some time in a dry place, such as a pantry shelf, for soap if used when new lathers too much and runs to waste.

The Ideal Family Laxative

is one that can be used by the entire family, young and old, weak and strong, without any danger of harmful effects. It should have properties which insure the same dose, always, having the same effect, otherwise the quantity will have to be increased and finally lose its effect altogether. These properties can be found in that old family remedy, Brandreth's Pills, because its ingredients are of the purest herbal extracts, and every pill is kept for three years before being sold, which allows them to mellow. We do not believe there is a laxative on the market that is so carefully made.

Brandreth's Pills are the same fine laxative tonic pill your grandparents used. They have been in use for over a century and are sold in every drug and medicine store, either plain or sugar-coated.

"For years I starved, then I bought a 50 cent bottle of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, and what that bottle benefitted me all the gold in Georgia could not buy. I kept on taking it and in two months I went back to my work as machinist. In three months I was as well and hearty as I ever was. I still use a little occasionally as I find it a fine blood purifier and a good tonic. May you live long and prosper."—C. N. Cornell, Roding, Ga., Aug. 27, 1906. Kodol is sold here by Ed. D. Heckerman.

NEW MILLIONS AN ACRE

Statistics on Realty Value in the Greater Pittsburgh District Disclose Some Startling Values.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 15.—Ten million dollars for one acre of land—think of it. There are many towns that one could buy outright for less than half this sum. Yet in Pittsburgh's townships section you would have a mighty hard time securing an acre, exclusive of buildings, at even this immense sum. Not long ago this sum was refused for a Fifth Avenue property.

Ten or fifteen years ago $15,000.00 a foot front was considered high—now between the $17,500 and $18,000 mark in other words the property has increased in value at the rate of $500 per foot front per year.

Three years ago H. C. Frick purchased the Cathedral site for $1,325,000—today it is questionable as to whether $2,500,000 would buy it.

Some Fortunes Made.

About 50 years ago Capt. O'Hara, father of the late Mrs. Schenley, invested in real estate in various sections of what is now Greater Pittsburgh. Before he died he saw the few thousands he had invested turned into hundreds of thousands. When Mrs. Schenley died her will was probated in Pittsburgh and it showed that her realty holdings in Greater Pittsburgh were worth approximately $50,000,000.

The original cost of the estate did not exceed $100,000, yet while it lay idle it was enhancing in value at the rate of a million dollars a year.

Similar conditions exist in the Deany estate of Pittsburgh, which is worth about as much money, having increased in value in a like manner.

H. C. Frick, Andrew Carnegie, the late H. P. Oliver, Charles Schwab and other multi-millionaires have made several millions in Greater Pittsburgh realty. Henry Phipps' realty investments have netted him several millions. Many others of moderate means have made immense sums in Pittsburgh realty.

McKeesport Property Values.

Almost every town within a radius of 15 miles of Pittsburgh is now considered a portion of Greater Pittsburgh, rapid transit having joined these communities to the city proper. The greatest of these districts is McKeesport, a hustling, money-making, industrial section with a population exceeding 50,000. This is the home of the National Tube plant, the largest in the world, and various other industries. In this district alone over $200,000,000 are invested in mills and plants while $10,000,000 more are being expended in erecting an addition to the tube mill.

McKeesport realty increased from 50 to 400 per cent during the past few years. Downtown property sold a few years ago for $900.00 per front foot. Today it is hard to get it at $3,000 a foot. Three years ago lots in the residential section sold for from $500 to $1,000 each. Today $1,000 to $2,500 is only a fair price.

Wilmerding the great Westinghouse town, is another section of Greater Pittsburgh which shows a marked increase in value. Lots that sold for $1,000 to $2,500 only a few years ago are held and sold at from $15,000 to $25,000.

East McKeesport shows a proportionate increase in values.

Another Money-Making District. Arlington Park adjoins Wilmerding. East McKeesport and Turtle Creek and is but 30 minutes ride from Pittsburgh. These lots are now offered for sale. There are just 225 of them and owing to the low price at which they are offered it is certain that they will not last 30 days.

Within a stone's throw of Arlington Park lots are selling in Wilmerding at $1,500 per lot—that is at the rate of $12,000 per acre. Across the street in East McKeesport the lots are held at a price exceeding three times what Arlington Park lots are selling for.

For instance, Arlington Park acre lots are selling at from $800 to $2,500 each. Each of these tracts will subdivide into 10 to 15 25x100 foot city building lots so that the purchaser really gets Ten City Lots for the Price of One.

Think of it. Then full size lots for what you ordinarily have to pay for one in the immediate neighborhood. Can you afford to allow this opportunity to go by unheeded? If you want an investment where can you equal this?

Arlington Park is on the belt line of the Pittsburgh Street Railways Co. and a car in each direction passes every 10 minutes for every point in the county.

Many Homes Are Needed.

Thirty thousand men are employed in the Turtle Creek valley and only 5,000 of them reside there. The cause of this is that there are not sufficient houses in the district. There is not any available ground except away up on the hills or hillside. Houses built in Arlington Park will find tenants at once. It is the logical home site for those men.

With the completion of the $10,000,000 addition to the National Tube plant in McKeesport 5,000 additional homes will be necessary for the workmen. Arlington Park is the only available home site for them.

We guarantee that any unsold lot in Arlington Park at the end of the first year will be advanced not less than 25 per cent over present prices. So you see you make 25 Per Cent the First Year.

We are offering Arlington Park lots on easy terms. Twenty-five dollars secures and lot, $3.00 to $25.00 a month pays for it. No interest. No taxes.

TORTURING PAIN.

Half This Man's Sufferings Would Have Killed Many a Person, But Doan's Cured Him.

Thousands of grateful people are telling every day how Doan's Kidney Pills cured them of distressing and dangerous kidney and bladder troubles.

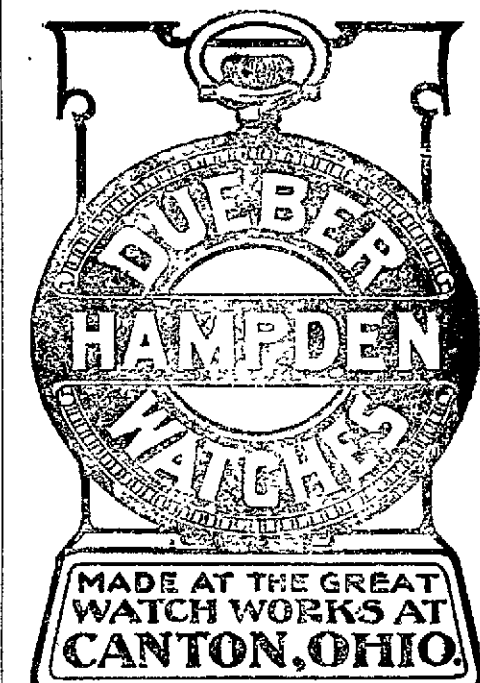

Yet other thousands are suffering every day from these same ills. Why? They are either very negligent or very skeptical. Neglect of kidney disorders leads to dropsy, diabetes, Bright's disease and other fatal diseases.

Sincere, honest testimony like the following should convince every skeptic.

A. C. Sprague, stock dealer, of Normal, Ill., writes: "For two whole years I was doing nothing but buying medicines to cure my kidneys. I do not think that any man ever suffered as I did and lived. The pain in my back was so bad that I could not sleep at night. I could not ride a horse and sometimes was unable even to ride in a car. My condition was critical when I sent for Doan's Kidney Pills. I used three boxes and they cured me. Now I can go anywhere and do as much as anybody. I sleep well and feel no discomfort at all."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Sprague will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers; price, fifty cents per box.

A WORTHY CAUSE

Effort Being Made to Raise a Permanent Fund to ESTABLISH A HOME

At Huntingdon For the Poor Children of the Juniata Valley, by Prof. D. Emmert.

In the year 1882 a law was passed prohibiting the retention of children over two years of age, in almshouses for a period longer than sixty days. This law was framed by a state convention of directors of the poor. It was approved by the State Board of Public Charities and modeled after other similar laws then in force, with good results in other states.

The institution of this law marked a new era in the care of dependent children in Pennsylvania. Hitherto children were housed with the aged, demented, and oftentimes vicious inmates of the almshouses under conditions that made improvement in character and morals impossible. Directors and stewards wrestled with this problem with no prospects of relief. Children were "bound out" under a system which involved no adequate supervision and often hardship for the child.

In many cities and in a few country districts, homes for children had been founded by private benevolence. Usually these homes were under the control of some religious denomination and represented a spirit of commendable Christian activity.

The following is the text of the law:

"(a) It shall not be lawful for the overseers or guardians or directors of the poor in the several counties, cities, boroughs and townships of this commonwealth, to receive into, or retain in, any almshouse or poorhouse, any child between two and 16 years of age for a longer time than 60 days; unless such child be an unteachable idiot, an epileptic or paralytic, or so deformed as to render it incapable of labor or service.

"(b) It shall be the duty of said overseers or other persons having charge of the poor, to place all pauper children, who are in their charge and who are over two years of age (with the exception named in the first section of this act), in some respectable family in this state, or in some educational institution or home for children; and one of the said officers shall visit such children, in person or by agent, not less than once every six months, and make all needful inquiries as to their treatment and welfare, and shall report thereon to the board of overseers or their officers charged with the care of such children.

"(c) It shall be lawful for any county or two or more counties in this commonwealth acting together, to establish and maintain an industrial home for the care and training of children; but such institution or home shall be remote from any almshouse or poor-house and entirely disconnected from the same, and under separate management from the keeper of the poor-house."

With the passage of this law the directors of the poor found themselves face to face with a new duty. Huntingdon county had but few children in the almshouse. Several years before the Home for Poor Children was founded at Huntingdon and children who would otherwise have become county charges were cared for by private charity. This work of humanity was based upon the principle that pauperism is a blight upon the child's future prospects and it should be helped and saved before reaching the almshouse. It was found that nearly all children with moderate care and training may find homes in private families, becomes self supporting and be given a fair chance for success. The same hearts that responded to the demands of the Home helped open the doors for the little ones. Under this spirit of cooperation the results were a surprise and inspired a new hope.

May 20, 1884, there was held at Huntingdon a meeting of the Directors of the Poor of Bedford, Huntingdon and Mifflin counties, with their attorneys and stewards, together with the trustees and friends of the Home. This body of earnest men, appreciating what had already been done for the counties, entered into an agreement by which each county should send all dependent children to the Huntingdon Home, they to pay $1.75 per week for each child. This amount was to cover all costs of food, clothing, medical attention and transfer to families, payment to cease the day the child was placed.

It was soon learned that the more active the work of placing out the more advantageous to the counties but the heavier the burden upon the Home. The children committed to families until they were eighteen years of age involved much responsibility and expense in supervision. The directors unanimously agreed to give a certain lump sum for this purpose, amounting to $250 per year each. This arrangement worked well for some years until another society aspired to organize the whole state and upon the basis of work done in the several counties, draw state aid. Bedford and Mifflin counties were persuaded to withdraw from the Huntingdon association and form local societies, discarding the temporary home and placing children directly into families permanently or as boarders. These local societies have much to recommend them in theory and fact. They awaken interest and are usually managed by good people but the experiment has not been highly successful in this section because of the great strain upon the time and personal strength of the workers.

When the counties withdrew, all the children, who had been placed and still remained in families, were left as charges upon the Home and a large amount of money due for board and supervision was never paid. These children are all grown. The Home performed its obligation to them and now as men and women—some married and prosperous—they come back to pay their tribute of respect to those who never forgot them. D. Emmert.

The Value of Good Looks

No one can afford to underestimate the advantages of good looks. A healthy skin, bright eyes, abundant and fine hair, white teeth, a symmetrical figure with an upright, graceful carriage, tasteful dress, go to make up an attractive personality, and are a passport to favor and distinction, which receives prompt and gratifying recognition. If added to these is a well-informed mind, a cheerful disposition, an unselfish and helpful spirit, the individual is as welcome as sunshine and as gratifying to look upon as a beautiful picture.

In the first place, you cannot look well without a good skin. If the digestion is bad, due to eating improperly, if there is constipation, or disorder of any of the internal organs, the fact is at once written on the skin. If one does not bathe properly the skin announces the fact. If one indulges in dissipation or pernicious habits of any kind, the skin tells of it. There are general directions which apply to all these cases of inquiries in regard to the complexion, lessons which you must all learn. In the first place, the skin must be kept perfectly clean, surgically clean. Do you know what that means? Not only must all visible dirt be removed, but the microscopic dirt. That which cannot be seen is the dirt that contains the impurities which act upon the skin. Clean sponges, clean washcloths freed from the remains of decaying soapuds, the remains of yesterday's ablutions. In order to have these clean, so that the use of them will not result in pimples and a muddy skin, they should be scalded every day and dried in the air and sun. Many a complexion has become clear and perfect by following these simple directions. Wash the face with the hands, rubbing it with the fingers and smoothing out the lines and wrinkles as the hot water is dashed upon it. Use a good, pure soap without odor. The New York World

THURSDAY-A-WEEK EDITION.

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World, now that a great Presidential campaign is foreshadowed, hopes to be a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only newspaper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happening through out the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are a Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1.50 apiece, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

THE THURSDAY-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and The Gazette together for one year for $2.20.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.50.

In the Long Run,

It's the man who turns out the best work who gets the best results. Veneering, imitations, shams may hold the boards for a time, and throw a glamour from the foot-lights; but in the long run, the public recognizes true merit, which, in the end, is the only thing that counts.

The success of our business is due to a combination of the best values that modern ingenuity can produce with a service that is careful, painstaking and faithful.

Are your buildings in good shape to stand the hard weather this winter? If not,—better let us sell you paint and save them before they decay beyond repair. A few dollars spent for a good paint, will save you a big bill for repairs. It is not too late to fix up your buildings. Three or four weeks of painting weather yet. Try B. P. S. paints—you'll not regret it. We keep everything that goes with paint—Brushes, Oil, Turpentine, Varnishes, Fillers, &c.

MONEYBAK BLACK SILKS

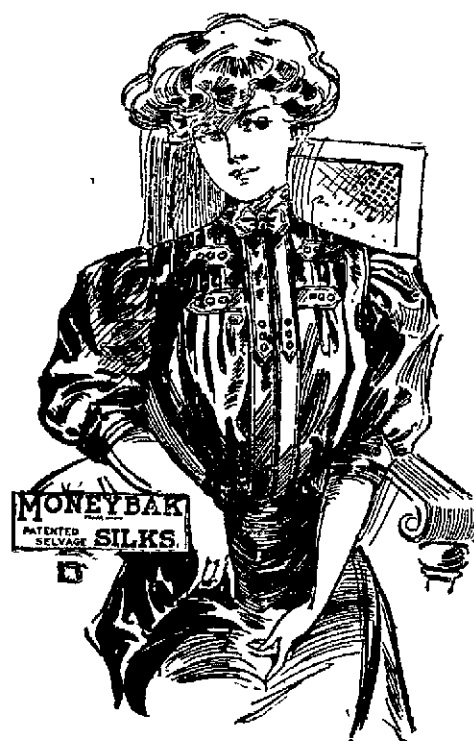

The longer we sell Moneybak silks the more pleased we are with them.

We can't sell so many yards of Moneybak as we do of the cheaper silks, but we know that every Moneybak sale means lasting satisfaction.

During the time we've been selling Moneybak—more than two years—we've had but one claim presented to us, which we think a remarkably good record; and though the circumstances clearly indicated more than ordinary hard usage, the claim was promptly allowed.

Moneybak black silks are guaranteed not to cut out, split, crack nor fade under any reasonable usage. If they should, bring them in and get your money back.

$1.25, $1.40, $1.50, $1.75 and $2.00 yard.
